DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 7-11 and 15-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Calabrese '226.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-6, 12-14 and 17-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Calabrese '226 in view of Monfardini '027.

Calabrese discloses in figures 1-4 a cervical collar substantially as claimed. However, Calabrese doesn't disclose the support member being rectangular, substantially flat, having rounded corners, the support members being a plurality of support members or the method step of moving the wearer's head from side to side to strengthening the neck muscles or testing the lateral support to see if an additional support should be added to support the user's neck. Monfardini teaches in figures 1-3 a support member 20 that is rectangular, substantially flat, has rounded corner (fig. 2) and a plurality of parallel supports (20, 21). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time that the invention was made that the support member disclosed by Monfardini could be substituted for the support member disclosed by Calabrese because both supports are functionally equivalent and used in the same field of endeavor. The supports could be a plurality of supports in order to provide support around the user's neck. It is very old and well known in the art to turn a patient's neck from side to side to strengthen neck muscles. It doesn't involve an inventive step or novelty to test a lateral support to see if additional lateral supports are needed to support a user's neck. A large individual such as a professional wrestler or football player would require additional support versus a small woman or child wearing the cervical collar would require less support members.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Calabrese '052 and Taylor, each discloses a cervical collar. Although each of these references is pertinent prior art, neither was used to reject any claims, in the first office action.
